THURSDAY MORNING, - - OCT. 20.

[Correspondence Cincinnati Commercial.] Letter from Chattanooga --- The Situation of Sherman and Hood.

CHATTANOOGA, October 16, 1864. Hood is bent on dire mischief, backed by probably his entire army. He is endeavor-ing to convince Sherman that he, too, can make flanking movements, though it remains to be seen whether or not his first grand effort will be crowned with success. Some days ago, probably two or three pre-vious to the recent attack on Allatoona, Hood commenced crossing the Chattahoochie near Campbellton, with the main body of his army. His first attack fell on Alla-toona, with what result is fully known.— His failure there extracted a great deal of danger from his present impulsive effort.

our wounded, belonging principally to the 23d corps, taken there during the progress of the late campaign. The entire number captured is so variously estimated that I can not fix upon any satisfactory figure.—

Less than 1500 is probably near the true one.

HOOD BEFORE RESACA AND DALTON. of Resaca, but did not venture to attack the massive fortifications there. Yesterday he seemed to have, pushed up his main body nearly to Dalton, which is occupied by a small garrison of our troops. Fighting was going on in that vicinity at last accounts.

DISPOSITIONS MADE TO MEET THE MOVEMENT.

in so promptly that we all thought he had escaped the bullets. But alas! poor Broad was a wounded man. He laid his burden on the ground saying, "I may have saved your life, but I have lost my own."—
He was shot through the bowels, and died very soon after. He was as brave a man as ever lived. It is generally known that Sherman, leaving an ample garrison at Atlanta, is pushing back to confront Hood—to figut him, in fact, wherever he finds him. Gen. Thomes Hood has moved rapidly, but up to this time he seems to have accomplished nothing equal to the risk and the wear and tear of his movements. There is hope, well-grounded hope, that he may be grushed between the upper and nether armies watch-

A PUZZLE. It is mysterious how Hood manages to supply his army at present. The solution of the paradox is, probably, that his pres-ent effort is a spasmodic one, made upon a limited number of days' supplies in wagon and haversack. To maintain a position at Dalton he would be compelled to wagon supplies over 125 miles. The season is at hand when that could not be done for onefourth of the distance. This fact indicates that his venture is a gigantic raid, and must end like all raids-in more loss to him than to us. There is a limited quantity of sup-plies in the country he is traversing; not enough, however, to subsist his army a week, even if it could be collected.

GENERAL THOMAS Is said to express perfect confidence in the early and layorable solution of this military problem. He, probably, shares with many other officers of the army the opinion that Hood will come to grief before many days. CHATTANOOGA

Is full to overflowing with officers and men who have accumulated since trains ceased running to the front. Every place is jam-med, the street included. There is a re-spectable army of odds and ends to defend the town if necessary. TRAINS REGULAR FROM NASHVILLE.

Trains arrive here regularly from Nashville, bringing, besides abundance of sup-plies, large numbers of recruits and returning soldiers. Several full, new one-year regiments have reached the department within the last three weeks, and all over a thousand strong. The morning reports are stiffening decidedly. SHERMAN'S PURSUIT

With the main body of his army is being made very rapidly. You will doubtless hear from it within a day or two. His advance should be within striking distance of Dalton to-day. There is no alarm or confusion apparent in any quarter that I have seen. Sherman is doing things systematically as usual.

The Wounded Soldier Not Good Enough for the White House.

LINCOLN AND STANTON REFUSE A ROOF TO THE WOUNDED SOLDIER. In the statement of the cause which led to his removal, which has just been published by Surgeon General Hammond, we find the following startling disclosure: "After Pope's defeat, when the wounded

"After Pope's defeat, when the wounded were brought to Washington by thousands, I found it necessary to extend still further the hospital accommodations. The churches and other public buildings were filled; the Patent Office was used for the sick and wounded, and the only other public buildings available were the Capitol and the Executive Mausion. The latter was not then occupied by the President or his family. occupied by the President or his family, and not long before a company of soldier had been quartered in it. I, therefore, made application for the Capitol, and for the East Room of the President's house, the latter to be used as an officers' hospital. When the application reached the Secretary, he sent for me, and I was again the recipient of his abuse. Again I repelled it, as I always did. I knew no reason why the sick and wounded should not have the best building in the country, if it was necessary. Hundrens were then lying on the ground for want of a place in which to put them, and I told him so in plain language. The end of it was, that the Capitol was or-dered to be turned over to me. He was afraid to refuse it; but he informed me that I should hear from him again on the sub-ject, which, however, I never did, except that he told a distinguished officer in the army that my conduct was highly presump-tuous. The East Room was never turned over if he ordered it." over, if he ordered it."

Let every Democrat cut this out and send it in his letter to his son, brother, friend, or comrade in the army.

The question, "Who united the South and divided the North?" is often asked. It is well and truly answered by a leading Re-week Mr. Thurlow Weed says:

"Messrs. Chase, Wade, Sumner and Chandler, with the Tribune and Post, COM-PELLED Mr. Lincoln to pervert and narrow the conflict as to leave us, to-day, with a united South and a divided North."

A MAN in Hartford, imprisoned for adultery and polygamy, committed suicide in his cell. With manly generosity he left a paper on which he had written—"A woman is responsible for all that happens to

JEALOUSY AND MURDER.—At Jaroslaw, on the Wolga, Mr. K., one of the richest landholders in the Government of Tijul, was walking with a friend, when suddenly, without apparent provocation, Count R. sprang upon him and struck him violently in the face. They fought next day, and the Count fell dead with a bullet in his breast. He had lived in great retirement with his wife and two lovely daughters in a castle adjacent to an estate of Mr. K.'s. The latter, a very handsome man, ters in a castle adjacent to an estate of Mr. K.'s. The latter, a very handsome man, applied himself to the seduction of the Count's eldest daughter, and, having succeeded, abandoned her for a time in order to seduce her sister. The elder girl, furious with her lover, confessed all to her father, and hence the duel. Miss de R., in despair at her father's death, in her turn challenged her faithless lover, and when he refused ed her faithless lover, and when he refuse to fight a woman she put on men's clothes and struck him in the public cafe. To avoid scandal Mr. K. thought it advisable to fly from the woman he had injured, and he set out on a journey. It is said Miss de R. has sworn to pursue and overtake him, and judging from her previous conduct she may well have the courage and energy to keep her word.—Corres. London Times.

A Brave Fellow .- In the battle of Sept. 30 there was a young man killed, a member of the Fifty-seventh Regiment, who used to live in Concord. His name was occupied Rome several days ago, capturing the negro garrison and a large number of our wounded, belonging principally to the 23d corps, taken there during the progress of the late campaign. The entire number of captured in the capture of the late campaign. The entire number of captured in the capture of the late campaign. The entire number of the late campaign.

was almost certain death for any man, but, said Broad, "I have neither wife nor child - Within the past three days, Hood, having passed the Oostenaula and Etowah rivers to their junction at Rome, appeared in front of Resaca, but did not venture to attack the massive fortifications there. Yesterday he ing an ample garrison at Atlanta, is pushing back to control Hood-to light him, in fact, wherever he finds him. Gen. Thomes is still in Nashville, and has charge of the forces between Dalton and Nashville, which constitute, in the aggregate, a large army. Hood has moved rapidly, but up to this ten brigadiers, a nigger and a missionary to do the job.

AUTUMN is slipping away—winter is at hand—the Presidential election is near, and some sort of military success must be had, to help Mr. Lincoln's prospects at the polls, no matter whose reputation may suffer. Meade may as well be the scapegoat as anybody else.
